Mr. Editor, I have a bit of news for you. I know you have not heard it, and I am confident you have never thought about it. I fear it will shock your nerves and cause you to have another one of those bad spells. Yet I must tell it. I cannot keep it longer. Get the camphire and heartshorn. Are you ready? Here it comes: We are having hot weather. The mercury has been getting higher and higher each day. And now while I write, if you will only believe me, it has crawled out and is sitting on top of the thermometer and is fanning and panting for dear life. It is awful hot out here. What will become of us poor mortals?

Monday was the day to sow turnipsed, and this is the way an old gentleman put 'em down: Some for you and some for I, some for the devil and some for the fly. If it don't rain pretty soon the old fellow will get them every one.

The weather continues very dry out here. The crops are looking badly, the pastures are drying up, tobacco is firing and turning yellow, and unless the early corn gets rain in a few days it will be cut short. Water is getting very scarce on the hills also.
